

Using git to manage multiple versions between labs. Each lab may have its own development version of Pychron which may contain laboratory specific changes, for example access to a custom piece of hardware. Changes are easily be shared among laboratories via GitHub and any conflicts are identified during the merge operation. All changes at tagged with a unique identifier.